

Abstract

A room energy conservation system has a radio frequency transmitter located within a master controller. When an occupant leaves the room, the radio frequency transmitter communicates to a remote receiver to limit the electrical power available from a coupled electrical switch.

5